MONDAY, MARCH 4, 1912.

An Evening Echo.
 Idleness is costly without being a luxury. It is hard work for those who are not used to it, and dull work for those that are.—Horace Smith.

With one of the Socialist town officers at Adamston trading tax receipts here for booze, it looks as if he knows where to get the "next drink." Maybe that is what "most constrained him" to inform himself on the Socialist philosophy as preached by a carpet bagger here who wants the city to be infested with him as the mayor.

One quart of whiskey for a tax receipt at Adamston under Socialism. It is a new way to collect taxes. Wonder where the town itself will come in later. That quart of whiskey was purchased with town property but it is a safe bet that that Socialist officer who did the trading did not invite the town to join him in "consuming" the stuff.

The "Next Drink."

A carpet bagger of only a brief stay in Clarksburg who seeks to inflict the city with himself as its mayor essays thus:

"Men that are most constrained to inform themselves upon the Socialist philosophy are the ordinary drinkers and drunks and the self-satisfied business man. The former are more concerned about the 'next drink' than their economic insecurity."

Literally interpreted, the quotation simply means that men seek Socialism to get more drink and that the question of the next drink is uppermost with them at all times.

The enunciation is rather momentous, coming as it does from one who assumes to propound the Socialist dogma among us and aspires to municipal control as practically a stranger in a strange land—King Do Do like.

Already the public is waiting to hear him tell how his ascendancy to an office for which he is not fitted and to which he will not be elected, will bring his men the "next drink." He has made his own campaign song but overlooked the chorus.

Perhaps, the next time he goes to the bar he frequents so often, he will add just a little more booze to the hilarity of his pronouncement of his "next drink" mission.

Sportsmen's Bills

Sportsmen throughout the country are expressing a lively interest in the hearings on bills for federal protection of migratory game birds, which will be held at Washington, March 6; the McLean bill before the Senate committee on forest reservations and the protection of game, and the Weeks bill before the House committee on agriculture. The American Game Protective and Propagation Association is backing these bills and through its efforts a large attendance at the hearings has been assured.

State game commissioners and delegates from local and state protective associations have been urged to attend and many have signified their intention of doing so.

This is the first time in favor of conservation have been given an opportunity to express themselves on this subject with any possibility of definite action as a result. Every sportsman should avail himself of the opportunity to go to Washington March 6 or to write to the chairmen of the two committees in support of the bills.

Model Flat School

A five-room model flat, a machine shop, and a school of business are some of the features incorporated in a public high school just opened in Newark, N. J., for the purpose of preparing girls and boys to be good wives, good workmen, and good clerks.

The model flat, containing dining room, pantries, bedroom and bathroom, in addition to a school kitchen, provides practical problems in housekeeping for the girls, who also receive instruction in other branches of housework, such as sewing, millinery, home sanitation, nursing, cooking and like subjects. The machine shop, one hundred feet long, is maintained in connection with a course in manual training. In addition to machine-shop work, the manual training course also gives the high-school boys the chance to learn forge work, pattern making and sheet-metal work. Preparation for such occupations as joinery, wood turning, and free hand and machine drawing is also provided.

As the school generates its own light and power, it is likewise enabled to give instructions in the handicrafts which pertain to these branches. In order to use this plant for instruction purposes, a special test room has been provided.

In the business school, courses in business practice and typewriting are offered. All these courses in housekeeping, handicrafts, and commerce are in addition to the regular English high school work.

The school plant provided for this work embodies a number of features which the experts of the United States bureau of education are observing with attention. The general plan of the building, whose eighty rooms will accommodate 1200 children, is a hollow square. On the first-floor level there is a large auditorium, extending through the second story, with an arcade on each side which permits the second-story corridors to serve as galleries in case of an overflow. The auditorium is lighted from above by an open court.

The roof covered with flat tiles, has been adapted for use as an exercise ground. There is also a complete gymnasium, 80 feet square. Teachers' rooms, as well as rest rooms for the accommodation of all, have been provided.

A room especially fitted for the teaching of music is located between the two lunch rooms, thus isolating it from all the other classrooms in the building, while at the same time allowing the privileges of music during the lunch hour.

The building, four stories high, rises to a height of nearly 100 feet above street level. It is fireproof throughout. The Collegiate Gothic style, executed in brick with terra-cotta trimmings, was adopted for the exterior. The interior of the auditorium is Elizabethan.

The erection of this building, just opened under the name of Central Commercial and Manual Training High school marks the latest step in a progressive campaign, begun by Newark four years ago, and under which nineteen school buildings have been put up in the last four years. These nineteen buildings have cost $2,700,000, of which $560,000 has been spent for the new Central Commercial and Manual Training High school alone. This high school together with another opened a year ago, has considerably more than doubled the high-school accommodations of Newark within a year.

Governor is Rebuked.

Governor William E. Glasscock while receiving praise for his administration of the affairs of the state is being held to account for his "pernicious political activities."

Several months ago the governor clamored against such activities on the part of federal and state officeholders and he is reported as having insisted at Washington that restrictions and prohibitions should be put on federal officeholders in this respect, and it is known that he threatened to officially decapitate state officeholders on the ground of engaging in politics.

Several federal and state officeholders resigned from political commitments to promote party peace and they became inactive, so far as the obnoxious sense is concerned, in politics. Scarcely has this been done before Governor Glasscock, the chief state officeholder in West Virginia, pledged headlong into political activity in a way pernicious to a large part of the Republican party in the state and repulsive to a great portion of the party in the nation.

In view of the fact that the national administration has great achievements to its credit and has faithfully carried out the national platform, it is not strange that Republicans generally in West Virginia deplore the inconsistency of Governor Glasscock and that they should enthusiastically endorse the following sentiment as expressed by the Taft Club of Kanawha county recently by resolution:

Resolved, That the Taft Club of Kanawha county, West Virginia, declares its allegiance to the Republican party, and endorses the national administration under the wise and efficient leadership of President William H. Taft, and that this club appeals not only to the Republicans of this county, but of the state of West Virginia, to give their undivided and earnest support to his re-nomination for a second term, for the following reasons:

First: The administration of President Taft has been in accordance with the declarations of the national convention which nominated him in 1908.

Second: He has with courage and consistency used every effort and influence to carry out the provisions and pledges of the Republican national platform of that year.

Third: He has enforced impartially and effectively the anti-trust laws. His administration has successfully prevented arbitrary increase in railroad freight rates.

Fourth: He has encouraged, and his officials have secured the conviction of violators of the law notably in the sugar frauds against the government and in many other cases equally as important.

Fifth: His administration has changed the postoffice department into practically a self-sustaining branch of the government, for the first time in the history of our country and increased the efficiency in extended service and increased the salaries of the postoffice employees over $14,000,000.00.

Sixth: By his policy he has preserved over 71,000,000 acres of the public lands to the use of the people thereby preventing the exploitation of this vast public domain by speculative interests and corporations.

Seventh: His successful administration of the construction of the Panama canal has reflected glory to our nation by the speedy, industrious and honest execution of the greatest project of ancient or modern times.

Eighth: His foreign policy has won the respect and admiration of the world and his advocacy of international peace has given him a first place among the great statesmen of Christendom.

Ninth: Recognizing the difficulties of procuring an ideal tariff, President Taft has provided a tariff board having for its purpose the adjustment and regulation of the inequality of the tariff due to changing conditions of trade and manufacture, thus removing in large measure this important matter from the domain of politics. He has approved a tariff bill that represents a revision on the lines of the Republican doctrine of protection to home industries and American labor, keeping steadily in view that one of the purposes of a tariff is to secure fair wages to the American workingman and markets to the American farmer. He has never approved a single schedule that raised the rate of duty on a single common food product. Every increase that he has approved was made on luxuries and articles other than of ordinary use.

Tenth: On the important questions involved in the relations of capital and labor he has been just and judicial, recognizing that only in a fair treatment of both can we have a happy and prosperous country.

Be it Further Resolved, That it is the sense of this meeting that the administration of the Honorable William E. Glasscock is worthy of, and has the approval of the Republican party in West Virginia, and it is a matter of great regret to the Republicans here assembled that the endorsement which they extend to the Honorable Mr. Glasscock's official and administrative action must be withheld from his personal political action, and it is peculiarly deplorable that the titular leader of the Republican party in West Virginia, receiving from his party and endorsement of his administration, should withhold his unqualified endorsement of this national Republican administration, which it so rightly deserves, and set himself in opposition to the head and leader of the party in the nation, the Honorable William Howard Taft, whose great knowledge, experience, moderation, impartiality and patriotic disregard of his own political fortune commend him as a statesman worthy of reward, and not of rebuke.
